The Marist Way: Offering Healing for a Fractured World

by Ted Keating, SM

The Marist Way describes a certain way of living the Gospel as one desires to follow Christ as Mary did. The twenty core values that comprise the Marist Way (bit.ly/4gKov2h) offer healing in fractured world as they emphasize bringing people together, serving the marginalized quietly and creating supportive communities that model divine mercy. To live the Marist Way is to be engaged in the work of Mary through her humility, simplicity and compassionate presence.

Fr. Jan Hulshof, a former Superior General of the Marists, wrote an article in the Spring 2025 issue of Today's Marists entitled "Marist Spirituality in Today's Chaotic World" (bit.ly/4yzNCLv). His article is a rich reflection on the role of Marist spirituality amidst the challenges we face — a spiritualty that keeps one aware of current events in the modern world. Below are four selections from Fr. Hulshof's article, which echo elements of the Marist Way core values that are highlighted in this calendar.

"If the foundations are destroyed, what can the righteous do?" (Ps 11:3)

People always thought they lived in a chaotic world, but now we are dealing with chaos squared. People have always been greedy, but now the top 1% of the world's elite owns 95% of our wealth, leaving 5% to the rest of humanity combined. Power-hungry people always had weapons to kill others, but now the most publicly discussed fear of the impact of Artificial Intelligence (AI) is that it will take the decision to use nuclear weapons out of the hands of humans. There were always people who sold lies for truth and fakes for reality, but now fake news and conspiracy theories have penetrated deep into the pores of our digital network society. People have always feared earthquakes and floods, but now it is the future of the planet itself that is at stake. In this chaos, dictators, mobsters and oligarchs are given a free hand and billions of people feel that they are at the mercy of a few. Greed, pride and lust for power are disrupting the foundations of society.

Marists do not live outside or above this world, anymore than their founder was an other-worldly person. Cardinal Castracane, who met Jean-Claude Colin, the founder of the Society of Mary, in Rome, declared: "Fr. Colin is a saint. He has understood his era." Colin's holiness consisted in understanding the world and not turning away from it, looking for means to heal it and to convert it. The world Colin lived in was a chaotic world like ours, different from today, yet with similarities. Colin was not a man of sociological or philosophical analyses, but he was an astute observer. He saw that greed makes people blind. The poor in the workhouses and asylums at Puylata, the home of the Marists in Lyon, France were dear to his heart. "The poor are all around us," he said, "but in our time people don't want to see them. That is why the poor are hidden." He saw the career-driven and ambitious people in church and society and the make-believe world of publicity. He noted the link between the pursuit of material prosperity and indifference in religious matters. Human society was in dire straits. It couldn't get any worse, Colin thought, and that's why he often talked about the end times. "The human race appears to me today to be like an old stump, one whose roots have been eaten by a worm. That worm is the unbelief, the indifference which has made the world pagan for a second time."

Mary, the mother of Jesus, was a key figure for Colin in this whole thing. Already during his years as a curate in Cerdon, he discovered that Mary was the providential woman needed in the chaotic time after the Revolution. That time, which is still ours, is the age of Mary. Asked to become the mother of the Messiah, she says "Yes!" That's exactly why she says "No!" to the greed, pride and lust for power that thwart the work of Jesus. In her Magnificat she sings of the Merciful One who cherishes life like a mother and at the same time of the mighty LORD who scatters the proud, overthrows rulers from their thrones and sends the rich away empty-handed. That is what God calls Marists to do in chaotic times: Say "Yes!" to life and say "No!" to the greed, pride and lust for power that threaten life.

The design features the Marist Family tree with the five pillars of the Marist Way inscribed around the circle: Prayer, Community, Learning, Service, and Vocation. The Marist Family tree unifies the Marist Way with Mary. Using the tree as a metaphor, the Mother of God acts as the deep root and guiding model, while the five pillars represent branches extending from her grace.

In a chaotic world where everyone is trying to become bigger, or at least appear bigger, than others, I am struck by the way Colin cherishes the word “small.” He says to the Marists in Puylata: “This is the only way to do good, being small. The Society is called to do an enormous amount of good. It must be faithful to its vocation. To be small, ignoti et occulti (“unknown and hidden”). The times call for that …” In his Constitutions he called the Marist Society “the smallest of congregations.” (1872 Constitutions, #1) The word “small” had for him a spiritual, rather than numerical meaning. Marists today are more sensitive than ever to this spiritual meaning of smallness, which of course has ecological implications. Yes, small is beautiful. Colin helps us to become smaller, to take up less space. First of all, to give God the place he deserves, but also to give space to all the inhabitants of the house of our planet. In Colin’s eyes, being small has a wonderful power. “The more self-effacing you are, the more marvels you will work.” (A Founder Speaks, 188:17) So, the ideal is not being hidden, but proclaiming the wonderful deeds of God and participating in Mary’s work.

Conclusion

The 2027 Marist calendar focuses on twelve of the twenty Marist Way core values. As you reflect on the calendar theme, it is our intent to show how the core values of the Marist Way, rooted in the spirit of the Society of Mary, provide a quiet but powerful antidote for a fractured world — emphasizing humility, relation connection and active compassion to heal communities and bring people together, as expressed by Fr. Hulshof.

Prayer for Continuing Our Marist Way

Loving God, we thank You for the gift of the Marist spirit — humble, hidden, and faithful like Mary at the heart of the early Church. As we face tomorrow’s challenges, help us to let go of false securities and to be renewed in Your transforming love. May we walk gently with Your people, building communities of compassion, hope, and service, not seeking power but offering presence. Through Mary’s example, may we remain a prophetic sign in the Church, trusting that our Marist way will continue to bear fruit for generations to come. Amen.

Simplicity

Marists promote simplicity in life, embracing minimal accommodations and shared possessions. They call the world to "live simply," recognizing that simplicity is a daily practice of gratitude and awareness of God's blessings, even amidst the challenges of modern society.

Humility

Humility is acknowledging one's strengths and limitations honestly, while living with gratitude, openness and a spirit of service. This kind of humility shapes Marist life, guiding thoughts, actions and relationships, and fostering a heart that is attentive, caring and aligned with God's will.

Hospitality

Welcoming others warmly and generously while creating a sense of belonging and family. In the Marist Way, hospitality means opening hearts and communities to everyone - especially those who are strangers, marginalized or in need - and becoming loving hosts who reflect God's inclusive love by inviting others into friendship, care and support.

One in Mind and Heart

To be “of one mind and heart” means to be deeply united with others in purpose, values and love. It is more than simply working alongside one another; it is sharing the same vision, caring for one another, and living with authentic communion. Such unity is rooted in Christ and guided by love, respect and a shared mission. To be of one mind and heart is to build communities where all are valued and connected, and where the spirit of Christ shapes both relationships and ministry. For Marists, this unity is not only a way of life, but also a gift they seek to bring to the wider Church and world.

Ardent Love of Neighbor

Ardent love of neighbor is a deep, passionate and active love for others. It goes beyond mere kindness or sympathy, involving a heartfelt desire to care for, serve and support people in practical ways. This love embodies selflessness, compassion and generosity, promoting the good, well-being and dignity of every person. In the Marist context, it is inspired by God's love and calls Marists to treat everyone - especially the poor, marginalized and suffering - with the same care and concern that Christ shows.

Hidden and Unknown

Serving others quietly and faithfully without needing reward or the spotlight. This value reflects the spirit of Mary in the Gospels - faithful, present and active, yet often unnoticed. It is doing good without needing to be seen or thanked, letting actions speak louder than words, focusing on others rather than oneself and serving quietly, humbly and generously. Marists, following Mary's example, seek to make Jesus known and loved not by standing in the spotlight, but by being present, gentle and faithful behind the scenes - bringing light in small, humble ways. To be hidden and unknown is to choose a life of humble service, trusting that God sees and that quiet goodness holds deep and lasting power.

Trust in God

To trust in God means placing your confidence in His love, wisdom and guidance, even when life feels uncertain or difficult. Trusting in God invites us to rely on Him instead of only on ourselves … to let go of fear, worry and the need for control, and to believe in His faithfulness, no matter the challenges we face.

Discipleship

To be a disciple means to be a devoted follower, learner and imitator of Jesus. A disciple does not simply admire Him from a distance, but commits to walking in His footsteps, learning from His teachings and living out His example of love and service. At its heart, discipleship is about relationship: loving Jesus, being transformed by Him, and carrying His mission into the world.

Inclusiveness (Making the Whole World Marist)

To “make the whole world Marist” means living and sharing the Marist Way core values so widely that their influence touches people everywhere, inspiring others to embrace Mary’s example in their own lives. At the heart of this vision is inclusiveness: welcoming and embracing every person, regardless of background, culture, abilities or differences, just as Mary’s love is open to all. By being inclusive, we break down barriers and create unity of “one mind and one heart,” making the Marist Spirit truly alive in every person, culture and place. In this way, the dream of making the whole world Marist becomes a reality, as Mary’s love and the Marist mission take root across the globe.

Union with God

To live in union with God is to enter into a personal relationship - knowing Him not only with the mind, but loving Him with the whole being. It is to become aware of His presence in every moment, to allow His grace to transform thoughts, actions and desires, and to surrender one's life in prayer and trust, seeking His will above one's own. ... For Marists, this union is not about achieving perfection, but about growing closer to God each day and allowing His Spirit to live and work through them, so that others too may be drawn into communion with Him.

Doing What Others Cannot or Will Not Do

Marists have always sought to serve those on the margins - the least favored or forgotten. ... This spirit is captured in the value of “doing what others cannot or will not do,” which means embracing generous service and courageous commitment, especially in places or tasks that are difficult, overlooked or unpopular. It calls Marists to be bold, compassionate and faithful, choosing to serve in ways that others might avoid - bringing hope and love exactly where it is needed most.

Missionary Spirit

Marists are called to go from place to place to spread the Good News, even to the ends of the earth. The Marist value of being missionary is an outward-focused dedication to sharing hope, peace and justice in an interconnected, often fractured global society. To be missionary is to be both messenger and servant of God's love, bringing light, hope and faith to the world through words, actions and a spirit of compassion.

SOCIETY OF MARY

MARISTS IN THE U.S.

At our best, we are instruments of God's mercy working to help others taste the boundless love of the Lord, especially those who find themselves on the margins. As Marists, we seek to go where the Church is not. We should enable all with whom we come into contact to experience the gift of reconciliation as well as peace of heart and mind. Mary is the icon of God's Spirit. As her fellow disciples, we pray that with God's grace we become the same. (Statement of Identity for the US Province 2013)
